

EXERCISE 4: THE BYSTANDER HAS A CHOICE

Below you'll find various reasons why a bystander could choose to help the victim. Cut out the six pieces of paper and rank them, the most important reason at the top and the least important reason at the bottom.

If you think two reasons are equally important, they could be placed side by side.

I know the victim

The victim is much younger than the perpetrator

I know what the fight is about

The perpetrator is much bigger than the victim

The perpetrators outnumber the victim

The fight has just started
